Market Overview and Fund Attribution

Equity markets have rebounded in 2019 following a double digit drop in the fourth quarter of 2018. For the quarter ended June 30, 2019, the Russell 3000® Index rose 4.10%, with both large-cap and small-cap companies contributing positively. For the calendar year-to-date ended June 30, the Russell 3000® Index was up a whopping 18.71%. "Growth" businesses, as categorized by FTSE Russell, continue to outperform "value" companies. For the five-year period ended June 30, 2019 the annualized return of the Russell 3000® Growth Index has nearly doubled that of the Russell 3000® Value Index 13.02% to 7.31%.

We do not subscribe to the categorization of businesses as either "growth" or "value". We seek to invest in "quality" businesses, or those that possess consistently high Cash Returns on Net Operating Assets (CRONOA), competitive advantages, and candid management teams that proficiently allocate capital. In our opinion, quality is growth agnostic; quality businesses inhabit both growth and value indices. Still, the market's obsession with owning growth regardless of price has affected our investment decisions over the past several quarters.

We are finding little opportunity at the high end of our quality spectrum. The highest quality businesses in our investment universe, or those that possess less cyclical and highly recurring revenue streams, low debt, and higher growth profiles, are in high demand. Their share prices have been driven upwards so that we have grown uncomfortable with their valuations. We have capitalized on the market's love for these businesses by selling them at prices that cannot support our assessment of their value.

In contrast, some Clarkston Bench Companies considered "value" businesses by FTSE Russell are unloved and trading at attractive valuations. These are still high-quality businesses, but they may operate in slightly cyclical end markets and possess less recurring revenue, higher but manageable debt levels, and conservative growth prospects. Equity investors, in their quest for growth, have ignored these businesses, sending their share prices downward to attractive valuations. Hence, the higher level of purchase activity, especially during the volatility experienced in the quarter ended December 31, 2018.

Valuations aside, we would rather own the highest quality businesses in the world. But we cannot control other investors and the elevated prices they are willing to pay for these businesses. However, we can control our investment philosophy and process. Therefore, we will continue to exercise patience, hold cash when opportunities are scarce, and act aggressively when the market provides us with opportunities.

DISCLOSURES

An investor should consider investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses carefully before investing. Visit www.clarkstonfunds.com to obtain a Prospectus which contains this and other information, or call 1.844.680.6562. Read the Prospectus carefully before investing.

Risks: As with any mutual fund, there are risks to investing. There is no guarantee that the Fund will meet its investment objective. The Fund is non-diversified, which means that it may invest a significant portion of its assets in a relatively small number of issuers and could experience greater price volatility. The Fund will invest in equity securities. Equity securities (which generally include common stocks, preferred stocks, warrants, securities convertible into common or preferred stocks and similar securities) are generally volatile and more risky than some other forms of investment. Although the securities of larger companies may be less volatile than those of companies with smaller market capitalizations, returns on investments in securities of larger capitalization companies could trail the returns on investments in securities of smaller capitalization companies. Cash does not fluctuate with the market like stocks, and potentially bonds, but cash is subject to inflation risk. It is possible to lose money on an investment in the Fund. Investments in the Fund are not deposits or obligations of any bank, are not endorsed or guaranteed by any bank and are not insured or guaranteed by the U.S. government, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve Board or any other government agency. The Fund has limited operating history.

The Fund seeks long-term capital appreciation by investing primarily in equity securities of U.S. large-capitalization companies. The Fund primarily invests in companies with a market capitalization above that of the smallest company based on market capitalization in the S&P 500 Index at the time of initial purchase. The S&P 500 Index consists of 500 stocks and is used as a leading indicator of large-cap U.S. equity performance.

The Russell 1000[®] Index is a market capitalization weighted index that measures the performance of the large-capitalization sector of the U.S. stock market and includes the 1,000 largest stocks in the Russell 3000[®] Index. The Russell 3000[®] Index measures the performance of the largest 3,000 U.S. companies representing approximately 98% of the investable U.S. equity market. Index performance information was furnished by sources deemed reliable and is believed to be accurate, however, no warranty or representation is made as to the accuracy thereof and the information is subject to correction.

Russell defines growth companies as those with relatively strong growth characteristics assessed on various criteria related to past and expected future revenue and earnings growth. Value companies are defined as those with relatively low valuation measures.
